Stricken Aboard Passenger Train

Mrs. Croul of Baird, O. Lying at Point of Death at Charles Golden Home in Warsaw

Stricken by appendicitis while enroute from her home in Baird, Ohio to visit Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golden at Mrs. Croul lies critically ill at the Golden home in Warsaw. Her husband and mother were both summoned to her bedside and last evening physicians gave little hope for her recovery.

Condition Critical

When Mrs. Croul left her home Wednesday morning she was apparently in the best of health. While on the train coming from Canton to Coshocton she became ill and when she reached the home of her friends in Warsaw she was suffering intensely. Thursday, Dr. Wright of Warsaw was called and advised sending for the relatives as he considered Mrs. Croul's condition serious. It is thought that the appendix was ruptured and that the patient is threatened with peritonitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Golden formerly lived in Baird and during their residence there became firm friends of Mr. and Mrs. Croul.

Sensational Charges Are Made by Husband

Charges of an ultra-sensational character are made by Russell Cox against his wife, Bertha Cox, in his answer and cross-petition to the latter's suit for divorce, filed in probate court Friday.

Other Men Named
The defendant admits that he was married to the plaintiff on December 25, 1900 and denies practically every other item set forth in her petition. He denies the non-support charge, claiming that he always worked every day that he able.

Their marital troubles started, the husband alleges, in 1908, when Mrs. Cox began having improper relations with other men, the names of Jock Fivecoats and James Turnbull being mentioned by the husband in this connection. He states that his wife would invite other men to their home, where they played poker and at times, when he returned home, he found as many as three or four of these visitors engaged in a card game.

No Place for Children
The defendant also charges that at the present time, his wife is living in adultery with one Sam Williams in the Conesville vicinity. He asks for the custody of their children, William, Charles and Freda. Claiming that the mother is not providing them a fit home and prays that her action for divorce be dismissed. The defendant is represented by Attorney George D. Klein.

Should Transfusion of Blood be Bar to Marriage?

Pittsburg, Jan. 16.—Physicians in this city are puzzled over a complex question that has arisen through the giving three pints of blood by William Stewart, a 20-year-old married man, to save the life of a girl he loves and whom he will marry, after procuring a divorce from his present wife, he declares.

Miss Myrtle Bowering, the charmer into whose arteries Stewart's blood was transfused, was near death's door when it was decided that her blood supply must be replenished. Stewart readily agreed to the request, and three pints of blood sufficed, and after the operation he calmly announced that he would marry Miss Bowering yet.

Several physicians who heard the remark declared that Stewart's assertion opened up a great question: The transfusion of such a large quantity of blood created "a blood relationship" between Stewart and the young woman, and the law forbade marriages of that sort.

Lives Simple Life; Dies at Age of 101

"Aunt Rachel" Bell's Long and Useful Life Closed at Home Near Adamsville

With the death of Mrs. Rachel Bell, aged 101, which occurred Wednesday night at midnight at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Minnie near Adamsville, Muskingum county, this section of Ohio lost one of its best known residents.

Mrs. Bell was familiarly known as "Aunt Rachel" Bell. She was the granddaughter of pioneer settlers of Muskingum county and her entire life was spent in the vicinity of Adamsville. In 1831 Mrs. Bell was united in marriage with William Bell who preceded her to the grave thirty-six years ago. Two sons, Jacob and George, of Adamsville and a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Minnick with whom "Aunt Rachel" made her home during the later years of her life, survive.

No Hurry Nor Worry

Aside from the fact that she lived to the ripe age of 101 years there were many other remarkable things about "Aunt Rachel" Bell. She was a woman who, during her entire lifetime, advocated "the simple life." Mrs. Bell was industrious and capable and she was possessed of a cheerful, kindly disposition. It is said that she herself attributed her longevity in part to the elimination of hurry and worry from her everyday life.

Eyesight Fails

Mrs. Bell's health was good until the last year of her life, when failing eyesight first troubled her, followed later by an attack of dropsy. The inroads of the latter disease were more than her frail constitution, enfeebled by age, could withstand and after but a few weeks' illness she passed away.

Mrs. Bell's 100th anniversary which fell in November 1911 was the occasion of a great celebration at the home in Muskingum county but in 1912 the day was passed quietly as it was about this time that "Aunt Rachel's" health began to fail noticeably.

Funeral Today

The funeral cortege will leave the Minnick home Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and proceed to New Hope Lutheran cemetery where the remains will be laid to rest beside those of Mrs. Bell's grandmother who died in 1814 and whose body was the first to be interred in New Hope cemetery in 1814.

WARSAW FARMERS' INSTITUTE OPENS

Three splendid addresses were given last evening at the session of the Independent Farmers' Institute held in the Warsaw Presbyterian church: D. D. Harsh of Minerva, Ohio gave an address on "Homemaking." Austin Herrick of Twinsburg, Summit county, spoke on "The Boy on the Farm" and Mrs. Ida H. Durbin spoke from the subject "The Freed Man."

The program of speeches was interspersed with musical numbers which added materially to the enjoyment of the program. An audience of more than three hundred was present at the institute in spite of the rainy weather.

Morning Session

The institute was opened Friday morning with an address of welcome by Capt. E. L. Lybarger and D. D. Harsh followed with a talk on "The Horse to Breed" Mrs. Durbin gave a splendid talk on "How to be young at fifty."

Afternoon Session

At the afternoon session Dr. F. M. Butler talked on "Tuberculosis in Cattle" and Mrs. Herrick discussed "Mixed Farming." An interesting round table discussion on stock raising consumed much of the time at this session.

The institute will be a busy place today—many subjects of interest are scheduled for discussion and the annual election and other matters of business will be attended to.

asked him to retract the remark, it is alleged that Dr. Austin refused to do this. Aged Pair Walk Far to Avoid Feud

Dennison, Jan. 17.—Penniless and footsore, Tom Riley, 69, and his wife, 72, Kentucky mountaineers, landed in this city Thursday afternoon. They had walked the greater part of the distance between here and Lee county, Kentucky, in their efforts to escape a feud, between members of their family and an equally notorious clan in Breckett county, the home of the Allen gang.

The aged couple had been on the road three weeks. They left Lee county when they were warned by their opponents in Breckett county that hostilities would be resumed.

"I have never been wounded and I never killed a man, and to escape from committing such a crime, my wife and I just packed up and left."

The couple were on their way to St. Albans where a nephew, a son-in-law, and a brother-in-law, Mill township trustees, provided funds to buy transportation to that city from this place. They left Friday morning.

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—Harry Scott, 26, was fined $200 and sentenced to the workhouse for a year in juvenile court Wednesday because he pawned his seven-months old baby's clothes to buy liquor. The clothes were a Christmas gift from Mrs. Scott's parents.

Central Delivery System Is Planned

Majority of Merchants Said to Favor New Proposition for Improved Method in Delivering Goods

Coshocton merchants are interested in the plan for a central delivery system which is being presented to them by Bruce Rodchaver, Mr. Rodchaver suggests a system for Coshocton merchants on the plan of the one now most successfully used in New Philadelphia. It is understood that the majority of Coshocton merchants are in favor of the proposition. The system would find its principal use in serving the grocerymen, but other merchants, in fact all merchants now supporting a delivery wagon of their own, would find the central system economical of both time and money.

Distributing Center

The central system at New Philadelphia makes use of one distributing center. All goods are brought to this place and systematically arranged according to routes, much as mail is distributed for a city carrier system in a post office. Four deliveries daily on week days and five on Saturday dispatches the work quickly and satisfactorily both to patrons and merchants.

Present System Costly

Interviews with some Coshocton grocers yesterday disclosed the fact that the present system of delivery costs a merchant anywhere from $65 to $80 a month. When it is remembered that Coshocton possesses more than fifty grocery stores it is evident that the item of delivery of goods is probably the largest in the merchants loss column for the year. It requires an intelligent, courteous and honest man to do the work of deliveryman satisfactorily for one who has not these qualifications will drive trade from a store instead of bringing it. All these matters have been taken into consideration in the perfection of the systems that have proved a success and it has been found that with a central system half the deliveryman can do twice the work in a given length of time.

Deliveryman, Not Hostler

A feature of the New Philadelphia system that will appeal to Coshocton housewives is the fact that the deliveryman who handles the food stuffs do not care for their horses. There is a central stable where all the horses are cared for by one man also hired by the company—the result is that both horses and drivers are prepared to give the best service. The co-operation of Coshocton housewives in this matter would doubtless help in assuring the success of the system and, should it become established in Coshocton, it would be bound eventually to prove itself one of the many items that may be adjusted in order to lessen the high cost of living.

Crowd Was Too Large

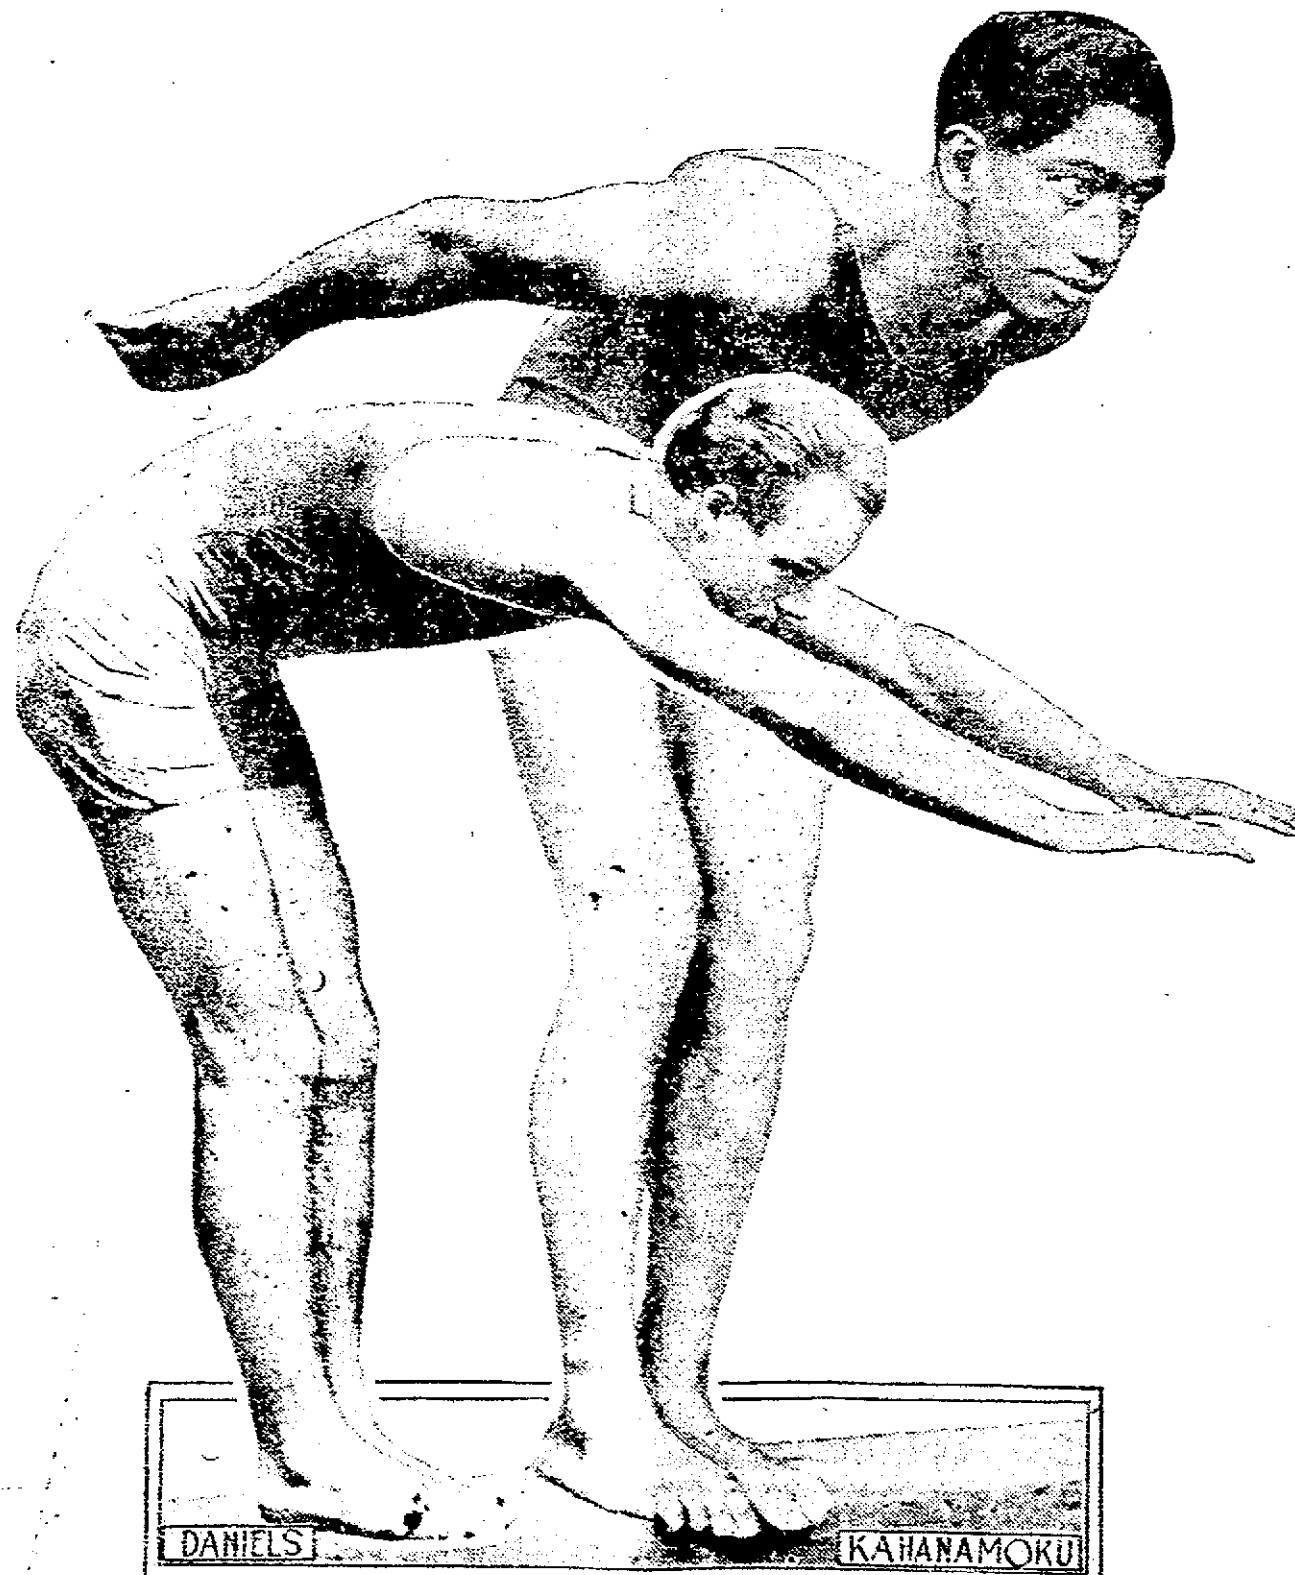

New York, January 17.—An investigation was promised today by state athletic commissioner McNeil, in connection with the management of the Rivers-Cross bout Tuesday night by the McMahon brothers, of the Empire A. C. It was alleged that more tickets were sold than the Manhattan casino would hold, causing a riot that took 120 policemen to quell and causing nearly a thousand fight fans to miss the fight. Many of them had bought tickets, but arrived late and found other patrons in their places. More than $1,100 was returned by the McMahon brothers to the disgruntled persons and it was said that about $900 more would be returned as soon as the holders of the worthless tickets presented their pastedors.

It is the old story of five thousand people trying to crowd into a space which holds only three thousand," was the explanation of Secretary Charles Harvey of the commission, who was among those caught in the outside crowd before the bout.

EXPLAINS OBJECTS OF FILM COMBINE

New York, Jan. 17.—The greater part of the session for taking testimony in the government's suit for the dissolution of the so-called "movie trust" was taken up with the formation of the General Film company, which absorbed, according to the testimony of Harry N. Marvin, president of the Picture Patents company, 57 of the 116 film exchanges which had first been licensed under the patents company after its formation in 1908. He went at great length into the reasons for the formation of the general film company, saying that it was formed because the manufacturers holding licenses under the patents company had felt the necessity of upholding the motion picture art in this country and protecting the business against immoral, obscene films that were being imported and distributed throughout this country by unscrupulous dealers.

In taking up the formation of the General Film company, Mr. Grosvenor, special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham, said that most of the directors were members of companies licensed under the patents company.

Baxter Makes Statement.

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—Clem S. Baxter, in a statement at Lima, said he had nothing to worry about in connection with the discrepancy of $2,000 discovered in the cash account of the Columbus Savings and Trust company, which failed Feb. 25, 1912. The shortage only recently came to light. Clem S. Baxter is a brother of F. E. Baxter, state superintendent of banking, and assisted in examining the trust company's books. The shortage was discovered between the time the bank books were checked up and the time when state examiners finished their work of the night following the failure.

Oporto, Jan. 17.—The British steamship Veronese, with 271 passengers, mostly third-class emigrants for South America, was driven on the rocks at Boanava, seven miles north of here, during a severe gale. Her position is said to be extremely dangerous. Attempts were made to rescue her passengers but tugs were unable to reach her. The seas are breaking over the boat on the dangerous coast and some vessels which made efforts to reach the distressed ship were smashed on the rocks. The latest report is that she will probably be lost.

MARRIED WOMEN IN THE CHORUS

The chorus girl is a source of worry and vexation, not alone to the young man who adorns the front row in the theatre or haunts the stage door with massive bunches of flowers, but as well to the patient, overworked manager who persists in hiring $200 a week marvels for a paltry $25.

One of these oppressed managers proposes henceforth to end all his troubles by employing a married chorus. He is not an impractical theorizing kind of a manager, but one of years of experience and substantial success. He says the frizzled-topped, fickle, undependable choruses will never again pester his waking hours and fill his nights with sleepless worries.

His fellow managers approve of his judgment to a certain extent. They know from experience that married women for the chorus are much more dependable. But they question their drawing power. They are skeptical of the ability of married women before the footlights to fill the front rows with the unbroken regularity of their more festive and irresponsible sisters.

We believe he is right even in this respect. The number of men who attend theatrical performances to flirt with the members of the chorus is more a creation of the newspaper humorist than a box office reality. The average man is attracted to the theatre more by the quality of the music and the acting he sees here than he is by the painted, artificial beauty of a bunch of giggling chorus girls.

We believe that modesty, in the long run is as much of an asset on the stage as it is in private life. The average man has never been able to learn, even though he has been a constant theatre goer all his life, just why plain, unadorned feminine beauty isn't far ahead of all the painted monstrosities ever crowded into a chorus. We believe that manager's idea is a good one. It is at least worth trying.

LA FOLLETTE'S PROPHETIC SPEECH

It is a characteristic of mankind that when the truth first comes to us we reject it. A few centuries back it was also the cheerful custom to torture or, mayhap, murder the man who first proclaimed a great truth.

We have got beyond that stage of primitive vengeance, BUT WE STILL REJECT THE UNWELCOME TRUTH WHEN IT FIRST COMES TO US. Three years ago Senator La Follette arose in the senate and stated the facts in relation to the consolidation of the big financial and industrial institutions of the country and told the people plainly where the path they had entered lead.

The senate laughed at La Follette. It was the usual thing in those days for the complacent, standpat, millionaire senators to insult their Wisconsin colleague in every way possible. But La Follette had a mission in life a big, serious mission and he received in silence the taunts and slurs of his enemies.

La Follette never indulges in personalities. He never attacks men. HE WAS AFTER BIGGER GAME. HE ASSAILED INSTITUTIONS AND SYSTEMS. He went on the perfectly correct theory that what a certain set of average men do under given average conditions all the rest of us would do under like conditions.

So when they insulted him with vacant seats and open taunts and sneers, his only answer was the sober truth delivered without invective, without bitterness, without the injection of personalities.

As a result of the discourses made before the Pujo investigating committee we all know that what La Follette said three years ago was the truth. It was almost prophetic truth. The biggest financiers in the country have testified before this house committee and directly or indirectly have confessed to the things La Follette said in the senate in 1910. Some of the things the Wisconsin senator said in that speech make interesting reading today, as witness the following:

Eighteen hundred and ninety-eight was the beginning of great industrial consolidation. No industry engaged in production brought about in the first instance an association of the independent concerns, which they had built up. These organizations were at the outset limited to those turning out finished products similar in kind.

Within a period of three years following 1898 such re-organizations were effected with a total stock and bond capitalization of $2,754,000,000.

In making these re-organizations the opportunity for a large paper capitalization offered a temptation to be resisted.

This was but the first stage in the creation of fictitious wealth.

The success of these organizations led quickly on to a consolidation of combined industries, until a mere handful of men controlled the industrial production of the country.

The opportunity to associate the re-organization of the industrial institutions of the country with banking capital presented itself. Such connections were a powerful aid to re-organization and re-organization offered an unlimited field for speculation. It was a tremendous temptation.

It contributes nothing of value to this discussion to denounce individuals, on the one hand, or laud them, on the other. I have compiled a list of about one hundred men with their directorships in the great corporate business enterprises of the United States. It furnishes indisputable proof of the community of interest that controls the industrial life of the country. It discloses their connections with the transportation, the industrial, and the commercial life of the American people. This exhibit will make it clear to anyone that a small group of men hold in their hands the business of this country.

No student of the economic changes in recent years can escape the conclusion that the railroads, telegraphic shipping, cable telephone, traction, express, mining, iron, steel, coal, oil, gas, electric light, cotton, copper, sugar, tobacco, agricultural implements, and the food products are completely controlled and mainly owned by these hundred men (naming them) that they have through re-organization multiplied their wealth almost beyond their own ability to know its amount with accuracy.

It is not necessary to examine in detail the related events that have led to this marvelous concentration of business. The facts are well understood and generally recognized.

But the country seems not to understand how completely great banking institutions in the principal money centers have become bound up with the control of industrial institutions, nor the logical connection of this relationship to the financial depression which we have so recently suffered, nor the dangers which threaten us from this source in the future.

That there was a tendency on the part of the great banking associations to merge and combine could not be overlooked; and while financial and economic writers had directed public attention to the fact, and had even pointed out the opportunity and temptation for the use of this augmented power in connection with the promotion of the speculative side of business organization, they have been slow to believe that banking institutions could be so prostituted.

Nevertheless, most conservative authorities suggested and foreshadowed the dangers that unfortunately actually exist.

The march of the gallant "Gen." Rosalie Jones and her suffragist army on Albany was not made in vain. Both branches of the New York state general assembly have reported favorably on the amendment granting woman's suffrage.

Scientists announce that there is enough caffeine in two ordinary cups of coffee to kill a rabbit. We have long wondered why rabbits never drank but one cup of coffee and now this explains the mystery.

A Connecticut man goes to bed each fall and stays there until spring, leaving his wife to do his work. He makes it a rule, however, never to turn in until after the November election.

The man who swore off drinking the first day of the year and has stuck it out until now, will find it a much easier contract to fulfill from now on.

Suffragists declare they can learn to vote if men can. But the trouble with the average man is that he is never sure that he has learned to vote himself.

The Wise Guy says: women who have been induced to raise their babies "scientifically" like to borrow one now and then to coddle.

BANDIT CONFESSES TO CHICAGO POLICE

Chicago, Jan. 17.—The story of the series of daring robberies by automobile bandits here in the last two months became known today, when State's Attorney Hynes gave out a detailed confession obtained from James A. Perry, a youth of 18, under arrest. Assuming the air of a dime novel hero, Perry admitted a score of robberies, including the shooting of Policeman Fred Sticken. Perry told how he robbed five stores in 25 minutes, and how he and three companions dashed through the business district of the city after committing one robbery and beating up a policeman who arrested them for speeding.

He also told how the car in which his gang did their traveling passed three and four times a night the automobile squad of policemen, and how they tooted their horns in derision at the sleuths.

More confessions are expected. A man who gave the name of Walter Scott is under arrest with Perry.

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—In the resolutions passed by the Ohio state board of agriculture a hard blow was aimed at the homeseekers' excursions which have been instrumental in luring so many Ohio farmers to the far west. "We favor," said the resolution, "the cancellation of homeseekers' rates and the discouragement of all land-promoting schemes that tend to lure Ohio farmers away from the Buckeye state to lands where the rubies of supposed prosperity and profit too often burst.

Sermon on Conversion by Rev. Ogden

Evangelist Ogden gave the second of a series of three sermons on "Conversion" at the Church of Christ last night. His topic was "The Means of Conversion." The sermon was a masterful compilation of scripture relating to the theme. Truly, the Bible is indeed a great book when unfolded by such a Bible scholar. Mr. Ogden has been honored nightly by surprisingly large audiences. In the course of his sermon he said: "Any one with ability and a desire and consecration has a call of God to preach." Surely if we measure him by his own statement his call is divine. Conversion is synonymous with being reborn and with becoming a Christian. As one cannot be a member of the kingdom of Christ without the rebirth, so all who have been born again are Christians and are no longer of the world.

Certain conditions must obtain before there can be a conversion. There must be the Word, the teacher, the listener, faith, repentance, confession and obedience.

Tonight will be the concluding sermon on Conversion. The topic is "Results of Conversion." The topic for Sunday morning is: "What we are and what we shall be." For Sunday evening the topic is: "Individual Influence and Responsibility."

MOTHER WANTS BODY EXHUMED

Mystery Surrounds Death of Delaware Girl.

Delaware, O., Jan. 17.—Mystery surrounding the death in Detroit Oct. 4 of pretty Mildred McFarland, 18, and possibly involving admirers in both Columbus and Detroit, may be cleared up if the proposition of exhuming the body from a local cemetery and examining it for traces of poison, is carried out. It was claimed at the time that she had committed suicide because bullet wounds were found in her body, but it is now believed that they may have been inflicted with a view to disarming suspicion that she may have died by other means. If poisonous matter is found, a murder charge may be placed against a Detroit traveling man.

Developments have come to light in the past few days which seem to intimate that the girl was either given poison to get her out of the way and possibly after pretension had been made by the giver, as in the Lucheson case in Boston, that the drug was a remedy for some ailment. Detroit officials are willing to investigate if facts seem to warrant such action, but the distance of the body from that city is an obstacle. Delaware officials feel they have no jurisdiction as the death occurred outside Ohio's borders. Lack of funds seems to be a decided hindrance and the girl's mother has appealed to some charitable inclined people, who may render assistance.

HOBSON TO MARCH WITH SUFFRAGETS

Washington, Jan. 17.—Folks walking near the White House were startled at midnight to see two young women on the south steps of the treasury department throwing their arms about and going through other strange motions. An investigation disclosed that Mrs. Benn S. Timmen and Miss Hazel Mackaye, sister of Percy Mackaye of New York, the two women in charge of the suffrage pageant to be held here March 3, were holding their first rehearsal. They continued their work for an hour and then returned home.

Bethina A. Miller, the New York woman aviator, said word that she will be glad to bring her monoplane here for the suffrage parade and take part if her employers will allow her. The suffrage leaders immediately began planning to dress her in suffrage colors and have her bring a message to "Columbia" on the treasury steps.

Representative Richard P. Hobson, hero of the Merrimac, agreed to lead a section of men in the procession, and with him will be James Lee Laid law and Oswald Garrison Villard of New York and other men.

Coshocton has long been proud of Miss Smith's achievements as a violinist of the first rank and it is with pleasure that her friends receive the news that she is to locate in her home city. Miss Smith comes to Coshocton with the most enthusiastic endorsement of her instructors in the Conservatory; she is prepared to give instruction in violin from the first principles through the most advanced grades.

Tomorrow morning the pastor will deliver a special illustrated sermon to the Sunday school. All are welcome to this service. Sunday evening the theme will be "The Master's Call." There will be special singing at each service; one of the special musical numbers will be "All Hail Immanuel."

Services will continue next week. On Tuesday and Wednesday evening the pastor will preach on the theme, "The Unpardonable Sin."

On Monday evening, the Rev. A. H. Johnson, singing evangelist, who has been assisting in the revival services at Canal Lewisville has been secured to sing at the United Brethren meeting for this one evening. Rev. Johnson's singing has been a most delightful feature of the Canal Lewisville meeting.

At the service last evening Rev. Stanbaugh preached from the text, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" The pastor laid special stress upon the word "neglect," and from the text he brought a forceful gospel message to his hearers. In the altar service which followed the sermon there were several conversions. The meetings are evidencing increased interest and more positive results each succeeding evening.

There will be service this evening at 7 o'clock as usual.

FOR THE BUSY WOMAN.

WOMEN who are busy in many ways, find it impossible to find the time to make their own dresses. They are sure to welcome this apron. It has big, capacious pockets, it covers the entire skirt and it requires only one button and button-hole to hold it in place. There are separate sleeves that are drawn on over those of the gown also, so that it is perfectly protected and can be kept dainty and clean without effort. Not housewives alone but artists and women employed in similar ways are sure to find the apron a good one. Percale and gingham are the materials generally used but butcher's linen is strong and durable and, at the same time, attractive in effect. Art students often like to make their studio aprons individual and attractive and the white butcher's linen with a little cross-stitch embroidery at the edges of the neck and pockets makes a very pretty effect.

For the medium size, the apron will require 2 1/2 yards of material 27 with 1 yard for the sleeves, or 4 1/2 yards 36 inches wide for both apron and sleeves.

The May Manton pattern 7264 is cut in three sizes, small 34 or 36, medium 38 or 40, large 42 or 44 inches bust measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

Famous Reformer Coming

Francis J. Heney, San Francisco's famous opponent of graft, and one of our country's best known reformers is to address the patrons of the People's Lecture Course Monday night at Grace church.

Francis J. Heney was foremost in the prosecution of graft in the city of San Francisco; in fact his activities in behalf of clean government were so objectionable to those whom he opposed that during a trial in the San Francisco courts one day, Mr. Heney was the victim of an attempted assassination. In spite of the threats which have been hurled against him, Mr. Heney continues to pursue his fearless course in the interest of clean public life—he is a man of power and those who hear him Monday are promised one of the strongest lectures ever heard in Coshocton.

How Send Babies by the Post?

Washington, Jan. 17.—The mailing of babies by parcels post is a real infant industry which Postmaster General Hitchcock is asked to foster.

In the circumstance of his bachelorhood, Mr. Hitchcock is considering seriously the calling into consultation of experts in the transportation of babies, as a letter which he received today presents to him a mail problem with which he is quite unfamiliar.

This is the letter: "Fort McPherson, Ga. Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

Sir—I have been corresponding with a party in Pa. about getting a baby to raise about home being without one. May I ask you what specifications to use in wrapping so it (baby) would comply with regulations and be allowed shipment by parcel post as express companies are too rough in handling. Yours,"

Babies in the opinion of the postmaster general, do not fall within the category of bees and bugs—the only live things that may be transported by mail.

WOULD REDUCE MILITIA'S COST

Solon's Take Kindly to Governor's Suggestion.

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—There is a movement in the legislature to curb the extravagance of the Ohio national guard. Governor Cox himself has taken the lead. The impetus given the movement by Cox's first message to the general assembly is being followed by favorable discussion of his statement.

"A thing to be avoided is the rapidly increasing expense of maintaining the militia. * * * It is scarcely conceivable that any necessity exists for such disbursements in our state as almost equal the total expense of two of three constitutional branches of the government—the judicial and the legislative."

The militia was not called upon once in 1911 to quell riots or disorders, according to the most recent annual report of the adjutant general's department available, nor in 1912, as far as such records at hand show.

And yet, if the militia gets all it is asking for 1913, it will take $682,232 to maintain it. Of this, the taxpayers of Ohio are asked to pay directly $517,232, and the federal government's share, to be paid in equipment, is $165,000.

The militia's estimated expenditures for 1913 are little less than the combined expenses of the three branches of government—executive, $27,500; judicial, including pay of all judges, $475,000, and legislative, $231,700.

It cost $667,112 to maintain the militia in 1912. This included $25,109 that went to officers who drew salaries in the adjutant general's office. It doesn't include the expense of keeping the state house in order, which is a part of the adjutant general's job.

An increase of salary from $3,500 to $5,000 a year is being sought for the adjutant general, and raises are asked for nearly all his assistants.

The cost of keeping the militia in 1912 exceeded by $22,000 the combined cost of maintaining the following state departments: Board of agriculture, which promotes farmers' interests; board of arbitration, which settles strikes; board of health; department of public works, which looks after millions of dollars' worth of state property; dairy and food department, that tries to get pure food and honest measures for the people; public printing department; department of factory inspection that safeguards industrial workers; insurance department that makes insurance safe; workmen's compensation department and the office of the secretary of state.

The darkness of the night slowly lifted, revealing only a gray, leaden sky. There was no dawn such as had gladdened their hearts the morning before, no fresh awakening of the day.

Instead, the coldness and gloom of the night seemed but to creep a little farther away, leaving its shadow over the world. A drizzling rain began to fall, and the wanderers on the beach were destined to a new draft of misery. Only Agatha watched, however; James gave no sign of caring, or even of knowing, whether the sun shone or hid its face.

He had slept fitfully since their hour of wakefulness together in the night, and several times he had shown signs of extreme restlessness. At these periods he would talk incoherently, Agatha being able to catch only a word now and then. Once he endeavored to get up, bent, apparently, upon performing some fancied duty far away. Agatha soothed him, talked to him as a mother talks to a sick child, and though he was restless and voluble, yet he obeyed her readily enough.

As the rain began to descend, Agatha bethought herself earnestly as to what could be done. She first persuaded James to drink a little more of the milk, and afterward took what was left herself—less than half a cupful. Then she set the bucket out to catch the rain. She felt keenly the need of food and water; and now that there was no one to heed her movements, she found it difficult to keep up the show of courage. She still trusted in Hand; but even at best he might yet be several hours in returning; and cold and hunger can reduce even the stoutest heart. If Hand did not return—but there was no answer to that. She believed he would come.

The soft rain cast a pall over the ocean, so that only a small patch of sea was visible; and it flattened the waves until the blue-fashing, white-capped sea of yesterday was now a smooth, gray surface, touched here and there by a bit of frothy scum. Agatha looked out through the deep curtain of mist, remembering the night, the Jeanne d'Arc, and her recent peril. Most vividly of all she heard in her memory a voice shouting: "Keep up! I'm coming, I'm coming!"

Ah, what a welcome coming that had been! Was he to die, now, here on her hands, after the worst of their struggle was over? She turned quickly back to James, vowing in her heart it should not be; she would save him if it lay in human power to save.

Her hardest task was to move their camp up into the edge of the brush-wood, where they might have the shelter of the trees. There was a place, near the handle of the sickle, where the rock-wall partly disappeared, and the undergrowth from the cliff reached almost to the beach. It was from here that Hand had begun

The STOLEN SINGER

by MARTNA DELLINGER

COPYRIGHT 1911, THE DOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

James' voice died away into incoherence and at last into silence. Agatha, holding his hands in hers, watched him as he sank away from her into some realm whither she could not follow. Either his hour of sanity and calmness had passed, and fever had taken hold upon his system; or fatigue, mental and physical, had overpowered him once more. Presently she dropped his hand gently, looked to the coverings of his couch, and settled herself down again to rest.

But no more sleep came to her eyes that night. She thought over all that James had said, remembering his words vividly. Then her thoughts went back over the years, recalling she knew not what irrelevant matters from the past. Perhaps by some underlying law of association, there came to her mind, also, the words of the song she had sung on the Sunday which James had referred to—

"Free of my pain, free of my burden of sorrow,
At last I shall see thee—"

What ages it was since she had sung that song! And this man, this James Hambleton, it appeared, had heard her sing it; and somehow, by fate, he had been tossed into the same adventure with herself.

Unconsciously, Agatha's generous heart began to swell with pride in James' strength and courage, with gratitude for his goodness to her, and with an almost motherly pity for his present plight. She would admit no more than that; but that, she thought, bound her to him by ties that would never break. He would always be different to her, by reason of that night and what she chose to term his splendid heroism. She had seen him in his hour of strength, that hour when the overman makes half-gods out of mortals. It was the heart of youth, plus the endurance of the man, that had saved them both. It had been a call to action, dauntlessly answered, and he himself had avowed that the struggle, the effort, even the final pain, were "worth living for!" Thinking of his white face and feeble voice, she prayed that the high gods might not regard them worth dying for.

Either his hour of sanity and calmness had passed, and fever had taken hold upon his system; or fatigue, mental and physical, had overpowered him once more. Presently she dropped his hand gently, looked to the coverings of his couch, and settled herself down again to rest.

But no more sleep came to her eyes that night. She thought over all that James had said, remembering his words vividly. Then her thoughts went back over the years, recalling she knew not what irrelevant matters from the past. Perhaps by some underlying law of association, there came to her mind, also, the words of the song she had sung on the Sunday which James had referred to—

They were near the bayberry bush, though entirely out from its protection. As the drizzling rain settled down thicker and thicker about them, Agatha tried again. Slowly she coaxed James to his knees, and slowly she helped him creep, as she had crept toward him in the night, along the stones and up into the sheltered corner under the bayberry. It was only a little better than the open, and it had taken such prodigies of strength to get there!

Agatha made a pillow for James' head and sat by him, looking earnestly at his flushed face; and from her heart she sighed, "Ah, dear man, it was too hard! It was too hard!"

It was a long and weary wait for help, though help of a most efficient kind was on the way. Agatha had been looking and listening toward the upper wood, whither Hand had disappeared. She had even called, from time to time, on the chance that she could help to guide the assisting party back to the cove. At last, as she listened for a reply to her call, she heard another sound that set her wondering; it was the p-p-peter of a motor boat. She looked out over the small expanse of ocean that was visible to her, but could see nothing. Nevertheless the boat was approaching, as its puffing proclaimed. It grew more and more distinct, and presently a strong voice shouted "Ahoy! Are you there?"

Three times the shout came. Agatha made a trumpet of her hands and answered with a call on two notes, clear and strong. "All right! Come back!" and then, "Call again! We can't find you!" And so she called again and again, though there were tears in her eyes and a lump in her throat for very relief and joy. When her eyes cleared, she saw the boat, and watched; while it anchored well off the rocks; then two men put ashore in a row-boat.

"And where are our patients?" came a deep voice from the rocks.

"This way, sir. I think mademoiselle has moved the camp up under the trees," was the reply, unmistakably the voice of Mr. Hand.

And there they found Agatha, kneeling by James and trying to coax him to his feet. "Quick, they have come! You will be cared for now, you will be well again!" she was saying. She saw Hand approach and heard him say: "This way, Doctor Thayer. The gentleman is up here under the trees," and then, for the first time in all the long ordeal, Agatha's nerves broke and her throat filled with sobs. As the ex-chauffeur came near, she reached a hand up to him, while with the other she covered her weeping eyes in shame.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come! I'm so glad you've come!" she tried to say, but it was only a whisper through her sobs.

"I'm sorry I was gone so long," said Hand, touching her timidly on the shoulder.

"Tell the doctor to take care of him," she begged in the faintest of voices; and then she crept away, thinking to hide her nerves until she could come to herself again. But Hand followed her to the niche in the rocks where she fled, covered her with something big and warm, and before she knew it he had made her drink a cup that was comforting and good. Then he gave her food in little bits from a basket, and sweet water out of a bottle. Agatha's soul revived within her, and her heart became brave again, though she still felt as if she could never move from her hard, damp resting place among the rocks.

"You stay there, please, Mademoiselle," adjusted Mr. Hand. "When we get the boat ready I'll come for you." Then, standing by her in his submissive way, he added a thought of his own: "It's very hard, Mademoiselle, to see you cry!"

"I'm not crying," shrieked Agatha, though her voice was muffled in her arms.

"Very well, Mademoiselle," acquiesced the polite Hand, and departed.

EVERY 183,000 TONS COAL COSTS ONE MINER'S LIFE

Washington, Jan. 16.—One miner's life is snuffed out with every 183,000 tons of coal mined in the United States. In 1907 when the federal bureau of mines was beginning its work the ratio was greater: One life was given with every 144,000 tons. Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, director of the United States Bureau of Mines, in his annual report today to Secretary Fisher attributes the decrease in the mortality to the federal government's work in the mining fields, and points out how the enormous death list may be still further reduced.

While much remains to be done, including a broad extension of the investigation of accident and rescue work so that it will include metal and other mineral mines as well as coal mines. Dr. Holmes shows that whereas there was an average of 693 men killed for every 1,000,000 tons of coal mined in 1907, this number decreased steadily to 6.65 in 1908, to 5.73 the next year, 5.66 in 1910 and 5.48 in the calendar year 1911. The figures for the year just closed, it is estimated, will show further decrease in the death rate.

The death rate in the metal mines of the country is nearly as high, he declares.

The enormous annual loss in mining and preparing coal for market, the huge waste of natural gas, as in the metal mining industries are mentioned by Dr. Holmes. This extravagance of natural resources, he asserts, should be checked.

"Pioneer educational work, temporary in character," is the way in which the director refers to the mine rescue and first aid among the more than 700,000 miners in the 15,000 mines of the country. Ultimately this must be taken care of by the coal mining companies through the training and organization of miners at each of the larger mines or groups of mines. He states that already a number of companies maintain rescue stations at their own expense. The chief purpose of the bureau of mines is to train miners in first-aid, mine-rescue and fire-fighting methods.

Health conditions in and about mines should be investigated, in the opinion of Dr. Holmes. Preliminary inquiries, he says, "have indicated the prevalence of tuberculosis and the presence of hookworm as miners' diseases in several different localities in the United States. It is important that this work should be extended rapidly, because of the fact that the health conditions, as well as the risk of accidents, may be influenced by conditions susceptible of easy improvement."

In all but two of the mines where large disastrous explosions have taken place during the last few years open lights were used, he says, and if safety conditions are to be improved it seems probable that the use of electric lamps will be widely extended. The bureau has made tests showing how electric motors should be increased to render safer their operation in gaseous coal mines. It has shown that explosive mixtures of mine gases may be ignited by the breaking of an electric light bulb.

The director dwells on the necessity of trying to prevent explosions rather than check them after they are started. In this connection he calls attention to the fact that there has been a "revolution in the use of explosives in coal mining," and the work of the bureau "in investigating explosives has alone a value far greater than the entire cost of maintaining the bureau since its establishment." He says that now more than 13,000,000 pounds a year are being used of "permissible explosives," whereas a few years ago practically none was used.

Horse Is Stopped in High Time

Dennison, O., Jan. 17.—T. B. Hicks and F. D. Ripley, two farmers living in Rush township, near Blizard Ridge, figured in an accident Wednesday which resulted in the death of a horse and came near causing the death of the two men.

Hicks, assisted by Ripley, had loaded a long, measuring 10 feet in length and 30 inches in diameter at the smaller end, on a wagon and were conveying it down a steep hill preparatory to taking it to Stillwater.

When near the Fivecoat residence the wagon suddenly began to slip and a few moments later turned completely over. One of the horses was lifted bodily and thrown completely over the other animal. It was at first thought that the horse had not been seriously injured, and Hicks started with it toward his home.

The animal went a quarter of a mile and then sank down and died two hours later. It was valued at $50. The other horse was uninjured.

Hicks the owner of the horse was walking alongside the wagon on the lower side of the hill, with Ripley on the other side, applying the brake. Ripley, seeing what was about to happen, shouted to his companion who just had time to jump out of the horse's way. Ripley also had a narrow escape.

The Liquor Forces Win First Round

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—Liquor forces won the first round of their fight when they practically persuaded the joint house and senate committee to conduct only two hearings on the license bill. These will be held Monday and Tuesday nights and admission will be by ticket only. Each salon will be allotted three tickets. The limitation on the size of the audience is sought to prevent demonstrations. Superintendent Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon league appeared before the drys and Nicholas Dittus of Dayton for the wets. The temperance forces said two hearings were not enough. There is no expectation that either of the bills now proposed for license will be passed. A compromise measure is expected, and in this the liquor people are expected to have the best of it.

STOMACH MISERY JUST VANISHSE

Time It! No Indigestion, Gas or Sourness five minutes after taking "Pape's Diapepsin."

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only fifty cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases, then you will understand why dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for indigestion or gastritis or any other stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion.

CONSOLIDATE RURAL SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—Centralization and consolidation of rural schools and churches to stop their decadence and promote their efficiency, were recommended by Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States; P. P. Claxton of Washington, D. C., commissioner of the United States bureau of education, and other speakers on "Country Life Day" today at the chamber of commerce auditorium. It was observed in connection with the annual meeting of the Ohio state board of agriculture here tonight.

Mr. Pinchot in the course of his address on the country church, said: "Country ministers are paid a little more, but they can purchase less than they could 20 years ago and church attendance in rural districts is less in proportion to membership than it was a score of years ago."

A Life Job
 "Consolidate the country schools and have one for every 16 square miles, put it in charge of a man who is given a contract for life during good behavior, give him a 20 or 30-acre piece of ground and a house and make him cultivate his land as a model farm build him a home as you have built parsonages for your preachers, put a shop or laboratory in your centralized country school and farmers' children will be able to secure education that will fit them for the complex life they must lead," recommended United States Commissioner Claxton.

Class of Tramps
 He also declared that "the country school teachers are the greatest class of tramps the country has ever known," because they rarely ever teach in one district more than one or two years. "Ministerial vivisection" by which one minister is divided up between from four to seven different churches was held by Herman N. Morse, historian of the Ohio Rural Life Survey, to be the cause of decline of the country church.

Prof. L. Vogt, of Miami university, said the decline in country schools is attributable to a lack of co-ordination between the various districts and urged the establishment of supervisors whose work should be primarily to supervise, not to teach.
